

The snakes that bake

Once upon a time an orange snake was lonely. He looked everywhere in the forest to find a friend that likes baking like him. So he looked everywhere in the forest and he finally found someone who loved to bake just like him. And there was another snake who was pink. It was a girl and she loved to bake just like him. And then they went to a house and found someone in it. And then they told the person that they loved to bake but they didn't know how to. So they asked if the person could help and he finally helped. Then the snakes finally learned how to bake and then they lived happily ever after.
