

Lost on the beach.
Written By: Kendall Stoller

“ Splash” Emma watched as the dolphins leaped up and down out of the water. She spotted something in the distance. It was shining.

“Mom”
Emma yelled “Can I go further down the beach? “

“Yes” Emma’s mom replied. Remember to stay near.”

Emma ran down the beach toward the shining object. Her dog chased her but she ordered him to go back. Her dog always listened so, it wasn’t a surprise that he listened.

When she finally reached the shining object she picked it up, and looked inside.

“Cool” she said, as she carefully removed all the trash off of the turtle. She released it. Then she decided she should go back. Emma looked around, but as far as she looked in all directions was water and sand.

Soon she realized she was lost. She began to worry. Will she ever find her family again ?

She sat on the ground. Dolphins began leaping up and down. Emma counted them. There were twelve.

“Wow” she said. Somehow she understood that they wanted her to follow them. She followed them, they led her to the main part of the beach. There were alot of people. The dolphins leaped away as she waved to them.

“ Goodbye” she whispered “and thank you”.

She asked people if they had seen her parents. But the replies were always the same, “no”. She missed her family. She was only eight and she didn’t know how to get home.

Emma spotted rocks and decided to climb them to get a better view. She looked around the beach. Emma wondered where her family could be. Then she spotted something in the distance.

“What is that she wondered ?” she wondered.

She soon realized that it was a dog. “ My dog, “ said Emma, very happily.

She ran quickly toward her dog. Her dog barked and barked, until she started to follow him. Her dog led her to her family. “Mom” She yelled.

Her parents happily smiled at her. “There you are! We were asking everyone where you were! “

They talked by the beach together and she told her the story. She decided not to go too far down the beach again.
